Eagles Embrace New Web Building Technologies

The discontinuation of the Local Web Program (a full report can be found in the Resources section of our Members-Only site), has led Eagles across the jurisdiction to find success using more functional and feature-rich alternatives.

Orlando #3496 used Weebly to create a more modern website featuring dynamic menus, a bold new design, and lightbox-styled photo albums at no cost. “I searched several recommendations and found Weebly the easiest to develop,” Orlando member Don Westfall said. “It was just basically a cut and paste operation and it went well. I found it to be easier than the current F.O.E. website developer.” Visit http://foe3496.weebly.com to check it out.

Shawn McGill and Matt Brooks of Derby City #2173 in Louisville, Ky., cooperated on a new website featuring a clean, modern layout more beneficial to the Fraternal Order of Eagles, it also has a wealth of features that make it stand out in ways not possible under our previous web program. Visit http://www.derbycityeagles.com to see for yourself.

These are just a few of examples of what Eagles can accomplish with the latest free and enhanced web technologies. If you have questions, feel free to contact the Grand Aerie Marketing Department at marketing@foe.com or by phone at 614-883-2210. We are happy to help you explore some of the best web offerings available. Remember, all changeovers must be made by June 1, 2013.

Michigan Eagle Riders Groups Come Together In Support Of Family In Need

Strands of grass blew across the front yard. Each one powered by the blasts of air and the jarring roars exiting the pipes of the sea of motorcycles gathered outside the home of Mike and Angie Quinlan. The crowd may not have been related by blood, but, on this day, there was no doubt they were a family.

More than 50 members of the Michigan State Eagle Riders had arrived to present the Quinlan’s with $1,110 in donations to assist however possible in the recovery of their son, Josh, who was severely burned in a work-related accident May 1.

The ride, organized by Howell member Cheryl “Sarge” Deziel, began at the Howell Eagles and made a stop at the Quinlan’s Aerie/Auxiliary in Lapeer before finishing with a presentation at their home. The donation was but one of many in a long line of efforts by fellow F.O.E. members to show support for one of their own.

“Since about a week after the accident, they’ve been tremendous,” Mike Quinlan said. “Josh’s hospital room was literally filled with cards. We belong to several different groups in the community but nobody’s shown us the support we’ve received from the Eagle Riders.”

Josh, 27, suffered burns over 80% of his body – many of which were third-degree. The high percentage meant skin graft surgeries would have to be done using donor skin, exposing his body to the risk of rejection. Through it all, Mike and Angie remained at his side.

“We couldn’t really afford to stay in a hotel long term,” Mike said, “so we’d wake up, travel the 70 miles to Detroit to be with Josh and around 9 p.m. or so, Two nephews and a niece of Josh Quinlan stand in the Quinlan family’s garage to greet Eagle Riders members arriving to show support in the wake of Josh’s accident.
Christmas Party

Christmas comes but once a year, so the old saying goes, but Aeries make the most of it. Into the Christmas-tree-lit Aerie homes, a bounteous good time is had by unfortunate youngsters. For these kids - orphans, the needy, the invalid - Aerie Christmas parties are joyous and merry occasions, indeed.

Such parties have become a cherished Aerie tradition. The programs may vary, but the blithe spirit of the Yuletide is transcendant. There are entertainment, good things to eat, song and laughter. Some Aeries have floor shows. Others show movies. And some put on theater parties. There's always something to delight the young guests and thrill their young hearts.

Typical of the Christmas parties that sponsored by Auburn, New York, This Christmas will mark the tenth annual party for the unfortunate youngsters of Auburn and vicinity. Ruddy-faced Santa Claus will be there. So will a host of Eagle city and county officials and Aerie officers and members. There will be ice cream, popcorn, nuts, candy, fruit and other goodies in abundance. There will be a floor show, with Truxton Hosley, one of the leading magicians of New York state, who pulls rabbits out of hats while the children gasp. There will be recitations, solos, assembly singing, and piano numbers by the children themselves. The Eagle band, in natty uniforms, will play.

So it will be throughout all Eagledom, good fun and high spirits, memorable occasions for the youngsters - and the oldsters, too.
