Fraternal Order of Eagles Donate $50,000 To Buescher Foundation

On Saturday, Nov. 1, proud Fraternal Order of Eagles member and NASCAR Nationwide Series driver James Buescher and his wife Kris, announced the creation of the Buescher Foundation, a nonprofit organization committed to providing support and resources to families going through the adoption process domestically.

During the 2014 International Convention in Orlando, Fla., the Fraternal Order of Eagles surprised James with a $50,000 donation to the Foundation. A check presentation was made during Saturday’s press event.

Inspiration for the Foundation came from the Buescher’s adoption of son, Stetson, in 2013. Their experience with the process shed light on the difficulties associated with adopting and motivated them to help less fortunate families exploring a similar route.

“Having gone through the adoption process ourselves, we know what it takes to be able to adopt,” the Buescher’s said. “Our goal is to take some of that stress off the families that want to adopt and give a child a loving forever home.”

According to the Foundation’s website, families adopting domestically that have been approved by an agency or facilitator may apply for a grant. There are no income requirements.

Portage, Ind., #3817—
The Little Aerie that Could!

A lot of Eagles clubs have nicknames that describe them or the area in which they are located, but probably none fits better than the nickname recently attached by the people of Portage, Indiana, to local Aerie 3817. It’s called the “Mighty Mites” club. Another good choice would be “the Miracle Workers.” Every year in June there is run down the main street of Portage a Grand Prix automobile race, and held in conjunction with the event is a Grand Prix Jamboree. The latter is a three-day festival featuring games, food and entertainment, and over the years the Jamboree has grown into the highlight of the summer season in Portage. Pulling it off successfully each year requires plenty of long-range planning, dedication and attention to detail.

As last June’s Grand Prix Jamboree approached, the bottom suddenly appeared to drop out when the local Chamber of Commerce decided to end its sponsorship of the event. Desperate to rescue the popular Jamboree, the organizer of the car race came to the Portage Eagles and a local mall organization and asked them to take over sponsorship.

Around town there were a lot of doubting Thomases who didn’t think a club as small as the Eagles — there are less than 200 Aerie and Auxiliary members — and not all of them are active — was capable of taking on even half the burden of organizing an event as big as the Grand Prix Jamboree. Determined to prove them wrong, the Eagles had several hurried meetings and set up a special committee.

But the planners’ drawing boards had barely been set up when another bombshell struck: the mall association decided it wasn’t interested in co-sponsoring the Jamboree after all and went the way of the Chamber of Commerce. That left the Portage Eagles as the only thing standing between the annual Grand Prix Jamboree tradition and oblivion.

Under the circumstances, nobody would have raised an eyebrow had Aerie Auxiliary 3817 decided to fold up its own tent and steal away. But instead the members redoubled their determination (and prayerful supplications) and went to work. The amount of things to get done was staggering. There was a need for insurance for the field where the festival would take place, and insurance for a beer garden. They had to find tables and chairs for the tents that would be set up, and arrange electrical lines and outlets for about thirty concession booths and an entertainment stage. Plus a zillion and one other things, and hardly any time at all in which to do them.

Came the night before the Grand Prix Jamboree and the Portage Eagles were still scrambling around. But finally everything was set. The show would go on.

Then it rained. For two of the three days.

But even though the customers took a bath, the Eagles didn’t. In spite of the weather, the festival actually went off without a hitch, and the club, which had expected to drown in red ink, recorded a small profit.

Since then the Portage Eagles have been the talk of the town, like David after he slew Goliath. And next June the ninth annual Grand Prix Jamboree, expected to be the finest ever under the sole sponsorship of the Portage Eagles, will again draw fans of car racing and good times from all over the region.

“All because,” says Aerie Secretary Art Mentreuil, “a little Eagles club said ‘We can!’”

Illinois
- Zeigler #2444 have partnered with Zeigler-Royalton High School to raise funds for the American Cancer Society’s “Coaches vs. Cancer” program. Aerie member and ZRHS basketball coach Matt Morgan originated the idea in 2009 and together, the Eagles, school and the community have achieved success far beyond their expectations. Zeigler-Royalton is a small school of just 160 students located in the county with the highest unemployment rate in the state, but has led Illinois in funds raised each of the four years they’ve participated. So far in the program’s fifth year, $18,000 has been raised for the cause with several more activities still planned. Last year, the school finished ninth in the nation. Overall, $71,000 has been raised. Funds are given to the ACS and used for research and patient services.

Indiana
- Mooresville #3988 donated $10,000 to the Mooresville Police Department K9 Unit. Thanks to the Eagles, the department was able to purchase its second dog.

Iowa
- Tama-Toledo #2828 presented a check for $5,000 to the Tama Police Department for their Cherry Lake Project. The department is improving the lake for recreational purposes.

Kentucky
- Newport #280 have been busy recently with a trio of successful events. Members raised $5,000 for Cancer Center and Hospice of Northern Kentucky on behalf of Past State Madam President Patricia Lauer. A fundraising Bowl-A-Thon raised nearly $700 toward current President Sheena Barlel’s charity, the Alzheimer’s Foundation. Newport held its annual Member’s Picnic, with Chair Debra Johnson honoring the Aerie and Auxiliary President’s Linda and J.R. Several honors were bestowed upon members during the picnic including the presentation of the Auxiliary’s first-ever Father of the Year award, honoring an Aerie member that goes above and beyond the call to help and assist the Ladies’ Auxiliary. Receiving the honor was Matthew Hugenberg, 45, a former Air Force Security Police Veteran and current Senior Police Officer of 20 years with the Covington Police Department. He is married to Auxiliary member Kandy Hugenberg.

Michigan
- Michigan #3996 held a fundraiser to benefit two area schools dedicated to teaching autistic children. The Eagles donated $5,309 each to Burger School for Students with Autism in Garden City and Webster School in Livonia. The funds will be used to purchase devices that facilitate learning and communication.

News & Notes

Piece of Eagles' History Finds Its Way Back To Council, Idaho
Throughout the Eagles’ 116-year history, countless Aeries have come and gone, but each one leaves behind traces of their existence that many F.O.E. collectors routinely seek out. Chuck Wood, a two-time Jr. Past Worthy President from North Mason, Wash., Eagles #4226, is an avid collector of Eagles artifacts and recently traveled to Council, Idaho, with a pin initially discovered by PWP and Oregon State Conductor Jeff Riffard.

The pin, which featured an eagle with the letters F.O.E. inscribed, was originally given to Eagles of Council #1267, which was established on Dec. 4, 1905 and folded in 1913, to designate their status as members. A report of the original charter showed several prominent community members as charter members of the Council Aerie.

Wood presented the pin to Council Valley Museum Board Chairman Dale Fisk for display in the museum.
